What's the latest?

DC Collaborative in print!

The new brochure for the DC Arts & Humanities Education Collaborative makes the case, describes its programs, and shows everyone – advocates, educators, funders, parents, teaching artists – how they can get involved to provide arts education to all DCPS students.

Art is Education Cleveland now online!

www.artiseducationcleveland.org gives access to lesson plans for building your community's art education program. See how Cleveland's integrated arts and literacy program works.

In case you missed it...

Understand Arts Learning in the era of NCLB

A new toolkit helps parents, teachers and education advocates understand how the era of NCLB affects access to arts education. The toolkit features "5 things you can do to keep arts in schools" as well as countless resources that work to shape NCLB at both the national and local levels. Click here to learn how to make your voice heard.
